

COGS 401: Journal Entries (10%)

You will submit seven journal entries during the term. The journal entries are open-ended. They should be at least 500 words and pertain to research relevant to at least one of the core fields (Philosophy, Psychology, Computer Science, and Linguistics). There is no maximum length. Your journal entries should focus on brainstorming/developing a topic for your proposal and/or COGS 402.

Each journal entry is worth 1% for on-time completion (including meeting the minimum requirements for length and relevance). You will receive 7% for completion.

You will submit a full journal at the end of term which will include all your submitted entries, in addition to other notes and thoughts you had over term. The full submission is worth 3%. To receive full points, your collection of journal entries must showcase different kinds of thinking/planning:

- At least two entries must focus on background/literature (e.g., summarising relevant articles)
- At least two entries must focus on brainstorming/developing ideas.
- The other three may fall into one of the above categories, but may also be something different (but relevant).
